By HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK-(NEA)-Everywhere you went around the country, tball men were crawling out of the woodwork.

And at the fight in Seattle, boarding the plane in Oklahoma City and in the Chicago hotel-lobby, the question was the same: "Is Terry Brennan going to make it at Notre Dame this fall?"

The Notre Dame situation probably comes to that, because this s the last year the Irish should have serious difficulty talent-wise. A big, swift and powerful group of sophomores and a well-loaded freshman class means brighter days ahead.

So, the problem for Brennan as a career coach is to come out alive this autumn. That means five victories in a tough 10-game schedule, starting at Purdue, Sept. 28, and running through Southern Methodist in Dallas, Dec. 7, with Indiana, Army, Pittsburgh, Navy, Michigan State, Oklahoma, Iowa and Southern California in between. Father John Cavanaugh, director of the Notre Dame Founda-non, isn't running around the country rapping Brennan's coaching to alumni groups, as one report had it. As a matter of fact, Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, C.S.C., president of the university, consulted Father Cavanaugh before appointing young Brennan.

There definitely is no movement now to replace Brennan with Joe Kuharich or anybody else.

But the fact remains that Brennan cannot survive any such disaster as befell the Irish last trip, when they dropped eight of 10 for their worst season in history. Making things worse was the fact that the Celts appeared a bit on the disorganized side in taking four severe shellackings.

There were extenuating circumstances a year ago. First, there were 33 injuries to men who were badly needed.

Only two seniors, Paul Hornung and Jimmy Morse, contributed substantially to the cause, and the latter was hurt most of the time. Hornung and Morse were the survivors of what turned out to be a poor freshman class. A number of seniors were incapcitated, some flopped academically and others' simply failed to measure up as first class college players

Brennan has better seniors this time and the juniors are a year older and wiser. Bronko Nagurski doesn't figure to be fooled as frequently as a defensive tackle, for example, Sophomores have been the difference in many a football campaign and Brennan has some pippins among no fewer than 36, half

Speed Limits Need Posting

The Jacksonville police force is doing a laudable job toward better traffic control within the city, but we think its efforts would be strengthened considerably if speed limits were marked for all motorists to see, either through the erection of signs or the paintings of markers on the streets.

Both the state motor vehicle laws and the city ordinance set prima facie speed limits at 20 miles per hour in business districts, 25 miles per hour in residential districts and 35 miles per hour in so-called "suburban" districts. But difficulty arises in that the boundaries of the differing speed districts are not marked.

The local ordinance defines residence district as "the closely built up residential portion of the city" and the suburban district is defined as that portion other than closely built up business and residence districts. How is the ordinary driver to know what section is regarded as closely built up and what is not unless there are signs of some kind posted?

Adequate signs would serve another, perhaps more important purpose. In addition to making the legal limits clear, they would serve to remind every driver to slow down and keep within those limits voluntarily. Safety reminders are always valuable and are never too frequently observed.

Learning The Hard Way

Normally when the Communist party gets a foothold in any free nation the world must perforce view it as a danger and a potential tragedy.

But, while the peril is just as real in India as anywhere in the world, the inroads of communism there could turn out to be a blessing in disguise.

The Indian definition of "neutrality" between East and West has from the start meant a curious leaning toward the East. So immersed in hatred of Western colonialism were the Indians that they could see no menace in Red tyranny.

Then the Communist party won ground in their country-in the southern state of Kerala. And now India is beginning to learn first hand what it refused to face abroad.

At first moderate in behavior, the Communists in Kerala now are trying to push through legislation to gain control of all private schools. Agitators in several sectors are being charged by Indian industrialists with "systematic sabotage" of important factory instal-

We of the West can't help wondering, now that the Communists have found their way inside the gates, just how neutral the Indian people can continue to feel toward those "friends of the masses" who devote themselves to clobbering the masses.

Forgot One Little Thing

It was fashionable in some political circles in 1956 to point to the large number of U.S. families still in the lower income brackets.

What was unfortunately ignored, of course, was the fact that income levels for the population as a whole have been rising consistently for many years now. They are, in reality, better than they have ever been.

The Census Bureau tells us that last year half of all our families had an income of $4,783 or more each. The big point is that this represents an ad- is still to be done.

vance of 8 per cent over 1955. In other words, in the earlier year half the American families had earnings of only $4,421 or higher.

About a fifth still had incomes of $2,000 or less-far too little for them or for the nation to be content with. But the percentage in this lowest category is dwindling.

Without question, it must be the goal of both parties to lift as many families as possible to decent living levels. Progress has been good, but we and a pair of cowboy boots. None change our way of living. cannot rest on past achievement. Much

This was hard work, and dangerous, too, because sometimes the motor kicked back, hurting a wrist or even breaking an arm. Because it was so hard to get automobiles started, few women ever drove them.

CRADLE OF WAVES - A Gulf of Alaska may spawn tidal waves such as those which struck Japan, Hawaii and other Pacific areas in recent months The U.S. Coast and Geodetic Survey pinpointed the crack (heavy black line on Newsmap) begins at Yakutat Bay below Anchorage, Alaska, and extends 250 to 400 miles across the Gulf. It is 500 to 700 feet below the ocean floor. The fault in the hoor is believed to be the birthplace of underwater earthquakes which generate tremendous sea waves (wavy lines on map) which sweep southward over the Pacific Ocean with the speed of jet planes. Dotted lines indicate the Aleutian Deep.

"Mark of a Champion" just a few little words but with a big meaning to all of us. The ability to give a little more, the stamina and courage to win in the clutch that's a golf champion. "Mark of a Champion" in a good used car means dependable transportation at a FAIR PRICE. OK "Used Cars are Guaranteed" to meet all the qualities of a true champion.
